Patterns of fibrillar collagen in the human temporomandibular joint in infancy, childhood, and adulthood. In this study the patterns of fibrillar collagen in the human temporomandibular joint were investigated in infancy, childhood, and adulthood, utilizing the technique of scanning and transmission electron microscopy of undecalcified fixed tissues. The results of these studies indicate that the condyle has a distinctively different pattern of collagen organization than the articular disc throughout the life span, but that the periosteum and articular disc are similar in their organization.

Q: React Native Redirect to different route after login I am learning react native and I have successfully been able to authenticate a user on my app. I am using the auth0-js library. In my app, there is a page I navigate to after authentication, and it's good if the user can click a button and be automatically redirected to the page they want to be on. I have tried several methods, but I'm not sure if this is the best way or not. Here is my

A simple, rapid and versatile method for the production of near-monodisperse nanoparticles with high optical density is demonstrated. As the nanoparticles are synthesized in a solution of water and a non-ionic surfactant, the process is termed the "co-solvent nanoemulsion process". The size and uniformity of the nanoparticles produced can be readily controlled using a range of factors including the nature of the surfactant, stirring speed and type of stirring blade, and the method can be scaled up readily. The method is simple, economical, free from toxic by-products, and is environmentally friendly as it uses recycled materials in the form of single-use tubes for the micelle electrokinetic process. The electrokinetic mixing of the aqueous and organic phases in the presence of a non-ionic surfactant was used to produce a nanoparticle dispersion in which monodisperse droplets were produced. A range of techniques were used to confirm that the nanoparticles were monodisperse in size and that there were no external emulsifying agents, any of which could lead to an increase in the nanoparticles' viscosity and hence heterogeneity. The mean diameter of the nanoparticles produced was 40-80 nm and the results are discussed in terms of the emulsion properties of the nanoparticles and their potential application in the field of nanoencapsulation.

Q: How to read local data in Vue.js using vuex? I have created one Vue.js project using vue-cli and then i have created my own component (VueFilterComponent) to use filter local data. My store.js is: import Vue from 'vue' import Vuex from 'vuex' import { shallowMount } from '@vue/test-utils' import { FileFilter } from './components/FileFilterComponent' import { PersonFilter } from './components/PersonFilterComponent' import { PetFilter } from './components/PetFilterComponent' Vue.use(Vuex) export const state = () => ({ filters: [{
